

Program Description

PROFESSION

The success of a team of health care professionals will need to have the information organized so that decisions and patient care plans can be made. The health information administrator will bring together data to assist the health care team, the patient, and the administration staff. The student who has interests in computer science, business management, the law, and medicine will find the role of the health information administrator challenging and rewarding. Health information administrators find many opportunities in policy-making, financial management, decision support and research in varying sectors of the health industry. Once known as "medical record librarians," today's administrators need more information and understanding as they bring together all of the data available as a policy is made or as a patient is treated. A person who is interested in how information is processed and retained will find this role challenging, as well as satisfying. Cutting-edge technology, which is always changing, plays a big part in the arena of information management.

PROGRAM

The Health Information Administration program begins in the autumn quarter and is based on the completion of two years of prerequisite course work at an accredited college or university. Concentration on the health information administration subject matter begins at Loma Linda University. It is the only program of its kind in California and has been offered by LLU since 1962.

PROFESSIONAL REGISTRATION AND CERTIFICATION

Upon completion of the program, and on the recommendation of the faculty, graduates are eligible to write the qualifying examination of the American Health Information Management Association for the designation of RHIA (Registered Health Information Administrator).
