Welcome

We would like to warmly welcome all those who have come to honor the memory of our donors and the gift that they have given us. The coordinators and participants of this program appreciate your presence although this is not why you came here. Your presence withstands those that had learned to appreciate the gift of living and letting live, the beauty of God’s creation and the results of evil. To the students, each donor had given you unforgettable and unique individual experiences that will be part of you for the rest of your life.

Today, we honor a highly respectable gesture to humanity, to the future of our health care professionals, and to the community at large.

B. C. Escobar-Poni, M.D.
Associate Professor
Department of Pathology & Human Anatomy

In Memory of Our Donors

You must have been selfless to realize and act on the fact that others could benefit from the gift of your body.

You must have been trusting to know that we students would respect, learn from, and be truly grateful for the gift you alone could bestow.

You must have been giving for you openly shared with people unknown to you the one thing that is completely yours.

You must have been brave to accept that your time in this life is limited and to act on that acceptance by choosing a place for your body, a place where your body becomes our most effective teacher.

You must have been loved for the strength of that love is witnessed by your gift.

We thank your family members for supplying that love, and for being here today in celebration and remembrance of you.

We honor the selfless, trusting, brave and loving people who have taught us so much and who remind us daily of our quest to become caring and competent physicians.

We are humbled by your gift.

Memorial Service and Convocation of Thanks

LOMA LINDA UNIVERSITY
School of Medicine, Class of 2011
School of Dentistry, Class of 2011
School of Allied Health Professions
The Department of Pathology and Human Anatomy
Willed-Body Program

Loma Linda University Church
April 22, 2008
11:00 AM